THE UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA STAFF BULLETIN

EDMONTON 7, ALBERTA

DECEMBER 10, 1970

A new venture in community colleges

A new college will be opened in Edmonton in the fall of 1971. Grant MacEwan Community College, Alberta's sixth community college, is planned to offer educational services that are not given by the universities, junior colleges, or technical schools in the province. The institution bears the name of the Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta, and a name well known in Western Canada as former Dean of Agriculture at the University of Saskatchewan, former Mayor of the City of Calgary, horseman, and author of numerous books on Western Canada.

Three years ago a committee was established by the Government of Alberta under the chairmanship of WALTER NEAL, Vice-President (Planning and Development) at The University of Alberta, then Professor of Educational Administration, to study the possible need for a community college in Edmonton. The recommendation that such a college be established reflected the existence of certain gaps in the educational process at the post-secondary level. The Board of Governors of the college was appointed and has been responsible up to this time for the planning.

The college will be supported by the provincial government's Department of Education through the Colleges Commission.

BARRY MOORE, Chairman of the Board of Governors of Grant MacEwan Community College, and also United Church Chaplain at The University of Alberta, describes the type of institution which the planners feel is needed. "The gap in the educational process from the students' point of view is large. Only 25 per cent of high school graduates go to university, some of the 'other' 75 per cent go to technical schools such as NAIT, but the middle ground is left. With the government's change in spending priority from the universities to the colleges, some of these needs will be attended to. We will offer some career programs, but not strictly vocational training, and will present courses in the humanities within and extra to these programs. Candidates will come through our doors for training as nurses, medical technicians, social service and community development workers and certain business operators."

The unique format of the college is a combination of ideas from community colleges in Ontario which concentrate heavily on adult education, and certain West Coast models where training is "sold" to businesses with instructors going into the company premises for classes. Grant MacEwan Community College will not give degrees and is not concerned with transferring credit to the universities in the province, as its primary function will not be as a "come-up" college to ease students into universities. Admission policies and fee scales will be flexible. Low income levels are among the principal groups for whom the college is planned, and a scale of fees for need will be in use. "Open door" admission policies will allow those without the minimum formal prerequisites to take courses in the humanities and social sciences. At present, matriculation is required for general courses such as English and philosophy. "There are many persons who are not high school graduates and are in no educational program who could greatly benefit from courses such as these," Mr. Moore believes.

The first appointed officer of the college is JOHN L. HAAR, the President, who will take full-time responsibility in April, 1971. Mr. Haar, who has been President of Centennial College of Applied Arts and Technology in Toronto since 1966, was chosen from 135 applicants for the post. According to Barry Moore, "Mr. Haar personifies the kind of college we want to build, a college not concerned with degrees, but with a wide variety of educational experiences." He was born in Vancouver and graduated from the University of British Columbia in 1950 with a Bachelor of Arts in history. He has five years of graduate study, as well as experience with UBC's Department of Extension, and the Banff School of Advanced Management. Mr. Haar will be a full member of the Board of Governors, joining Mr. Moore, MRS. WIN FERGUSON of Fort Saskatchewan, ROBERT

John Haar

Barry Moore

GUEBERT of Leduc, FRED KURYLO, and EDWARD STACK of Edmonton.

The hiring of staff for the college will be on a term appointment only, with no tenure. Many lecturers will be part-time people who are practitioners in their fields, or visitors to the city. The emphasis will be entirely on teaching, with the only research to be carried out relating directly to the development of the college itself. Guidance and counselling programs will be emphasized.

A permanent site for the campus has not been chosen yet, as the Board of Governors feels that building is not the first consideration. At present, negotiations are underway for the use of several existing buildings in Edmonton's downtown area.

Grant MacEwan Community College will be involved in manpower training with the federal government program for the unemployed, and will co-operate with the newly established Alberta Vocational Centre. Programs in development stages are police education, remedial education for adults, liberal and scientific studies, and many facets of continuing education.

It is expected that the initial enrolment in the fall of 1971 will be close to 500 students. Growth to 5,000 students is expected rapidly, with the maximum of 10,000 within perhaps ten years of the opening. In addition there will be those who are not in full programs but are taking general interest courses.

Dr. Neal welcomes the development of the college. "From the University's point of view, we welcome the new college because it will offer needed facilities. We hope

familiar objects on campus, making all textures its own.*

to see co-operation between the various educational bodies in the city." The college's organizers hope that Grant MacEwan Community College will be able to help complete the spectrum of educational opportunity in Alberta.

PROFESSOR HONORED BY LAVAL

RAYMOND U. LEMIEUX, Professor of Organic Chemistry, has been awarded an honorary Doctor of Science degree by Laval University on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the foundation of their graduate school of chemistry.

In a letter to Dr. Lemieux, the Rector of Laval says that they have always followed his remarkable career with great interest and rejoice in the success he has had in the fields of university teaching and scientific research.

Dr. Lemieux, who was born in Alberta, received his education in Edmonton, graduating from The University of Alberta in 1943 with first-class honors. He received his PhD from McGill University in 1946 and between 1947 and 1954 held positions at the University of Saskatchewan and with the Prairie Regional Laboratory of the National Research Council. Prior to joining the staff of The University of Alberta in 1961, he had been Chairman of the Department of Chemistry, and Vice-Dean of the Faculty of Pure and Applied Science, at the University of Ottawa.

Perhaps best known for his synthesis of sucrose, and for his pioneering work in the application of nuclear magnetic resonance to conformational recognition, Dr. Lemieux has received many honors; he was awarded the Medal of the Chemical Institute of Canada in 1964, and in 1967 was made a Fellow of the Royal Society of London.
